President's Message

Thanks to John Dane, the Central Pennsylvania Chapter of The Construction Specifications Institute now has its own LinkedIn Group! John took the initiative to set this group up, and invites one and all to join the Group and stay up to date with your Chapter colleagues. This is a great platform to let everyone else "out there" know what we are all about in central PA! You can see what other CSI chapters are up to by checking out their groups on LinkedIn too.

Just prior to the January Board meeting on January 10, 2012, the first meeting of the 2013 Middle Atlantic Region Conference Committee was held to plan the conference the Chapter is hosting May 2 through MY 5, 2013 IN Gettysburg, PA.\. The meeting was well attended, and featured a call for a conference theme. In keeping with the spirit of the 150th Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, one suggestion was BLUEprints for GRAY Areas, Conflict Resolution. Another suggestion half in jest was BIM – Battles in Minutia . The Committee is soliciting more ideas for the theme from the membership. The Committee can always use more volunteers, so consider joining in the effort by attending their meetings – the next scheduled meeting is January 24, 2012 at 4:00 p.m. in the Gannett West Building at 208 Senate Avenue in Camp Hill, PA.

President's Message

The Chapter's Construction Document Technologist certification review course usually held at HACC has been tentatively relocated to a different venue this year. Due to too few HACC students registering for the course this semester, the course was cancelled at the HACC campus; but will be offered there again next year. The Chapter has decided to offer the course off-campus if there is enough interest. The course will be given at the Gannett Fleming, Inc. offices beginning January 23, and continue meeting each Monday evening through March 26, 2011 (10 weeks). Here's the GREAT NEWS – the onetime fee for this special year is only $50! That is a savings of $90 off the normal fee of $140 when the course is offered at HACC – so if you want to add the CDT designation after your name, don't miss out on this great offer. For further information regarding the course, contact Paul Brunski by emailing him at pbrunski@noelkerhull.com or call him at 717-263-8464.

I hope to see you at February's dinner meeting at the Radisson when we will have an interactive "sensitivity training" program about disabilities, and how many commonly specified objects don't always work well for everyone. Don't be surprised if you are selected to have your legs immobilized, or have certain physical restrictions applied to you, and then are asked to perform common tasks. Jennifer Howell, who has Cerebral Palsy and works with the Uniform Data System (UDS), which is a core set of information appropriate for reviewing the operation and performance of health centers, will be the presenter.

- Buy One Get One Membership Program - addt'l members, how to parlay the free membership, 20% recruitment per CSI pushing new membership

12-1 Outstanding Chapter Award Meeting

- Need dedicated committee focus

New Business:

1-1 CSI Community Development Committee Questions:

- John Groff intended to get info out prior to meeting, explained Ray Gaines had questions and needed response. Questions for chapter:
 - What do you need to be successful as chapter? Active members
 - List top 3 issues and support needed?
 - Monthly chapter mtgs? Activities?
 - Newsletter?
 - Website? Is it current?
 - Special events planned?
 - Any chapter leadership training?
 - Best non-CSI leadership program attended?

Adjourned: 6:03

Final note: Charlie is on ballot for CSI Institute Treasurer.

Adjourned: 6:04

The next board meeting is scheduled for 5:00 PM on Feb 14th at the Radisson Hotel and Convention Center.

Chapter Certification Study Course

ATTENTION!! This year's course fee has been reduced by almost 70%. This is a one time opportunity!

January 23 begins the Chapter Certification Study Course at the office of Gannett Fleming in Camp Hill. (Will not to be held at HACC this year.)

If you are interested in the program, follow the instructions below to get enrolled. It is highly recommended for anyone taking the CDT exam.

February 2nd is the early deadline to register for the CDT, CCS, CCPR, and CCCA exams, so don't delay. March 2nd is the final deadline.

What is CDT? It stands for Construction Documents Technology. Some of the benefits to getting your CDT means:

- Adding "CDT" after your name, to your business card and to your resume
- Understanding how a project unfolds from conception to delivery
- Understanding the documentation involved
- Getting listed in the Certificant's Directory

The certification exams are scheduled for April 2 - 28, 2012, and are available at Prometric Testing locations throughout central Pennsylvania. Go to www.csinet.org and click on "Certification" in the upper right-hand corner.

Study Course:

- Dates: January 23 thru April 2, 2012
(Monday evenings for 10 weeks)
- Time: 5:30 to 8:30 PM
- Location: Office of Gannett Fleming,
209 Senate Ave., Champ Hill, PA
- Cost: Normally $140 NOW $50.
- Registration: Contact Paul Brunski at pbrunski@noelkerhull.com or call 717-263-8464
- Textbook: CSI's Project Delivery Practice Guide (Text book is not included in course cost, but can be purchased directly from CSI)

The study course is designed to assist candidates preparing for the examination by offering a complete overview of CSI's Project Delivery Practice Guide and the AIA General Conditions publications. It's also a great way to brush up on your skills regarding contract document relationships, change orders procedures and formats, or the elusive contents of the AIA A201.

If you have any questions about the class or the certification program feel free to contact me at 717-263-8464 or pbrunski@noelkerhull.com.

Invest in yourself! Get certified!

Paul Brunski CCS, CSI
Chapter Certification Chairman

CSI's 2012 Honors & Awards Call for Nominations

Jeff Snyder
Awards Committee
Chair

Welcome to the Construction Specifications Institute's 2012 Honors & Awards Program! CSI's Honors & Awards Program recognizes the talent, achievements, and notable contributions to the construction industry that support the mission of CSI. Participating in the Honors & Awards Program is a great way to let members and others in your community know they are appreciated and valued. So if your chapter hasn't participated in the Honors & Award Program in the past couple of years, this is the year to submit forms and submittal requirements. Be sure to download the 2012 guide that is posted at www.csinet.org/awards. As always, it will be important to use the current forms when preparing any submissions.

3. Honors & Award Guide Webinar: A free webinar will be presented on Tuesday, January 10, 2012 at 2 pm ET, to highlight some of the changes in this year's guide as well as answer questions regarding this year's Honors & Awards Program. You can register for the webinar now at <https://www1.gotomeeting.com/register/961389336>

4. Fellowship Mentoring: If your chapter is preparing a Fellowship nomination package, then consider consulting with a fellowship mentor. A list of mentors can be found at www.csinet.org/fellowship.

In the meantime, if you have any questions, please email awards@csinet.org.

2012 Honors & Awards Submission Deadline: May 4, 2012

Awards Committee Chair

a nomination package!

With the tremendous success in uploading electronic submittals and endorsements last year, this process will continue again in FY12. If you didn't upload electronically last year, consider trying it this year. Not only will it save the cost of printing and mailing, you will also get immediate notification that your submittal was received so there is no guessing whether the package arrived on time.

The May 4th submission deadline sounds far off, but now is the time to start organizing and planning for the 2012 nominations. Begin by surveying chapter members and others in your community or region for those people, firms, and organizations that have made a difference in the construction industry and the mission of CSI. Then download the 2012 Honors & Awards Guide to determine the appropriate honor or awards category. The guide has a helpful matrix that makes the nomination process clear and straightforward.

To keep you informed about all the honors and awards, an email will be sent each week from now until the end of February to highlight the different awards and any applicable changes. Each chapter is strongly encouraged to develop a list of qualified candidates to submit for the numerous Institute Honors and Awards. Non-members are also eligible for several awards including (but not limited to) the Construction Technology Award, the Excellence in Construction Information (EICI) Award, the Environmental Stewardship, the Michelangelo Award, and Honorary Membership. Remember, the only way to guarantee someone doesn't win an award is to not submit a nomination package for them.

Some key items to note for this year's Honors & Awards Program:

1. Nomination Deadline: Friday, May 4, 2012 at 5pm ET
2. Newly Revised Honors & Awards Guide: The FY12 Honors & Awards Guide has been revised with some new

3 reasons to not get certified

Aren't you tired of all this talk about certification? No one will tell you, but there are a few good reasons to save your time and skip the exams. Why waste the time and effort on something you probably don't need? If any of these reasons apply to you, sit back and relax - you're in great shape.

You're irreplaceable

Doesn't it feel great? The principals understand and love what you do, and the rest of the staff simply can't believe you know as much as you do. If you're a consultant, your clients realize there is no one else who can do the job quite as well as you. Sure, there might be other people who can do your job, but it's obvious to everyone, they are far less qualified. You're on top, and no one can take your place. Certification won't make you any more valuable.

You have a great job and you don't need another one

You have looked around, and it's clear there is no better place to work. You have a great compensation package, and, because you have been holding the same job almost twenty years, you know your firm or your clients are completely loyal. There is no way they would turn you loose or cut into your income or benefits. If you are approaching retirement, you know you will never need to work again. You're not going anywhere, and you don't need to be certified.

You make too much money

I'm sure you're quite comfortable with your salary, even after the sagging economy of the last few years. You make more than enough to take care of your needs, with plenty left over for your cabin, your annual vacation to the Bahamas, and your flourishing Keogh plan. Kids in college are no problem, and you may even have a fund set up for the grandchildren. You can't possibly make any more money even if you do get certified.

Reality check

I don't know anyone who fits in any of these categories, and I don't know many people who would not benefit from certification. While certification won't make you irreplaceable, or ensure you'll keep your job, or get you a raise, it increases the possibility of all of those things.

Like it or not, the business world relies on credentials, at least for preliminary evaluation. A person who graduates from a school or apprenticeship program may have a good education, but when a company is hiring, the person with credentials is considered more valuable. A graduate architect or engineer has less to offer than a person with a professional license, and a master mason looking for work will have an advantage over an apprentice.

In the construction industry, CSI credentials are significant. As a specifier, I have great respect for the CDT. When new sales representatives visit my office, the first thing I look for on their business cards is CDT. If they have it, they automatically get more respect and credibility, because I know they are familiar with conditions of the contract and Division 01, and I know they have an understanding of the relationships between owner, designer, contractor, and supplier. If they don't have it, before they leave my office they get a brief sermon about the value of the CDT. I know I am not alone in this; virtually every specifier I know feels the same.

In my corner of the world, specifiers' jobs are rarely advertised; when positions open, architectural firms seek out those specifiers with the CCS, and recognize the value of the CCCA. Similarly, many manufacturers look for representatives with a CDT. Some require their reps to have a CDT; others may not have a formal requirement, but do encourage their reps to obtain CSI credentials.

When I became a specifier, I knew little about specifications and nothing about CSI. I had graduated from an accredited school of architecture, but the only reference to specifications I recall was a casual mention in our Professional Practice class. The school apparently believed there was nothing essential in contract documents - specifications or drawings, at least nothing that could not be picked up on the job with little effort.

Not long after taking the job, my boss suggested I join CSI. That being a time when a suggestion from the boss was tantamount to an order, I joined the local chapter, and quickly acquired CSI's Manual of Practice. Eureka! All was revealed! What previously had been a confusing collection of documents suddenly took on meaning, as, for the first time, I was able to see all of the documents as an integrated, coordinated whole. I joined the chapter study group, and passed the CCS exam about a year later. Without the understanding I gained from the MOP, and from studying for the exam, it would be much more difficult to do my job.

Well, it's certification season again. If you work with specifications, either preparing or reading them, I urge you to pursue CSI credentials. If you're new to the industry, studying for the CDT will be an eye-opening experience. If you've been around a while, but haven't taken the exam, you may be surprised to find that there is logic behind the documents and processes we use daily. "It ain't what you don't know that gets you into trouble. It's what you know for sure that just ain't so." (Mark Twain? Will Rogers?)

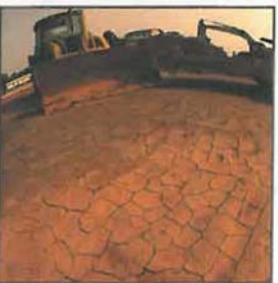

Rather than give you all the details about this year's exam, and take the chance of providing the wrong information, I'll just refer you to www.csinet.org/certification. There you will find everything you need to know about exam dates, registration for exams, and a free online seminar that will help you learn about the benefits of the CDT.

Calling All Reps!

Would you like to highlight your company or a special product? Do we have a deal for you. For a mere $125-$150 you can display your wares during the social time and have 10 minutes of everyone's attention during dessert at one of our CPC/CSI dinner meetings. What an awesome opportunity to hit several specifiers at once. If you are a member of this chapter, it will cost $125. If you are not, it will cost $150. For more details, see the CPC-CSI.org website. To schedule a table top, contact Bill Deck at wdeck@rlps.com. Thanks!
